A NECESSARY MEASURE

A Bill in the Interest of Victims of Indian Wars

Senator Dolph has introduced a bill in the Senate which is intended to provide a way by which people who have suffered loss by Indian depredations may have their claims properly and speedily adjusted. There is a law on the statute-books which permits persons who have sustained losses on account of Indian depredations to prepare and file their claims with the Secretary of the Interior, who is charged with the duty of investigating them, and when found just, to report them to Congress. Acting upon this provision, thousands of these accounts have been presented by citizens of California, Nevada and Oregon, and the claimants have expended large sums of money in the preparation of the evidences necessary to establish their losses. This has been going on now for nearly twenty years, yet up to this time not one of these claims has been paid. The Secretary of the Interior continues to investigate the claims, and each year reports the just ones to Congress, but here all action ceases.

Nearly every year a large sum is voted to pay citizens of Kentucky, Tennessee, Maryland and other border States for property destroyed during the war. To secure at least some semblance of justice for the citizens of California, Nevada and Oregon, whose claims are still in the committee rooms of Congress, or buried in the basement of the Interior Department, Senator Dolph has introduced a bill permitting these and other claimants who have sustained similar losses to bring suit in the Court of Claims, and it is believed that with the support of the entire Pacific Coast delegation Dolph will be able to force Congress to adopt his measure, in which event the claimants can at least have a hearing and decision of their cases.

General Hancock died poor, and the fact being known to his friends and comrades a subscription was started for his widow. The plan was originated by General W. T. Smith, General J. B. Fry, William Burns and T. L. Crittenden. J. Pierpont Morgan is treasurer of the fund. These sums have been signed Samuel J. Tilden, $1,000, William B. Grace, $500, M. R. Brown, $250, John D. Cummings, $250. The circular accompanying the subscription paper says the General was left poor by calls upon his official hospitality and the constant charities which he gave to those in distress.

The President desired to attend the funeral of General Hancock, but finds it to be impossible for him to do so. The Cabinet will be represented by Secretary Bayard, who will act as pall-bearer, Secretary Endicot and possibly one or two others. Secretary Whitney will not be able to attend, but will detail a number of officers to represent the navy.

It is believed that the President will not fill the vacancy caused by General Hancock's death until after the retirement of Pope next month, when nominations are likely to be made to fill the two vacancies in the grade of Major-General and the second grade in Brigadier-General.

Locomotive No 162, the oil burner, took a freight train from Sacramento to Davisville and worked so much better than before that the railroad men are inclined to believe that the experiments with her will soon be crowned with success.

All the United States 4 per cent bonds in the name of the late William H. Vanderbilt have been transferred to his heirs and forms the largest individual transfer of Government bonds ever made.

The rank and file of the Republican party do not propose to have any of the Bill Sharon racket played on them this Fall. The man who essays to lead the fight must mean business—Carson Appeal.

"NO BILL SHARON RACKET."

The Cry for the Senatorial "Sack"—What the People Say

CARSON, NEV., Feb. 11, 1886

EDITOR JOURNAL.—It will be remembered that a few months ago a syndicate of wealthy men imported a candidate from California for the U. S. Senate from Nevada, with the reputed understanding that they would furnish the necessary means to enable him to make a moneyed contest for that office. Several newspapers being anxious for such a contest published a few kind words in favor of the imported candidate. Some of them even went so far as to intimate that the selected candidate was a man of such immense brain that the people living in Nevada ought not to require or expect him to condescend to become a resident of this State as there was no chance for any employment here of a man of his caliber. It now transpires that all these editorials were written in order to bring about a friendly boom for the great and good man who had so kindly consented to allow his peculiar talents to be utilized by the Republicans of this State for the sole purpose of putting him into an office where he could be of service to the syndicate which imported him—under a promise that coin therefor should, in due time, be forthcoming, and that the strings of the promised sack have not, as yet, been untied.

The Carson Appeal speaks right out in plain language that will not be misunderstood by anybody, that the newspapers don't intend to have any more "of the Bill Sharon racket worked on them this Fall," and adds that "the man who essays to lead the fight must mean business." This is giving the syndicate fair notice that if coin is not forthcoming the imported candidate will not receive any more puffs in its columns.

It is admitted, by the friends of the syndicate, that the imported candidate has nothing in his own favor but his energy and cheek, and that if his promised financial backing fails the candidate from California will have to be withdrawn.

But beyond and above all these newspaper considerations it might as well now, as ever, be understood that the rank and file of the Republican party do not intend—under any consideration—to support any imported candidate. Nevada has, already, been sufficiently disgraced by her citizens heretofore advocating the election of men who have no sympathy with the people. A coin fight in behalf of one who only comes into the State for the purpose of qualifying himself for the office, and who intends leaving it immediately after election—whether successful or not—can not and ought not to win.

A few newspapers, of a certain type, may be influenced with coin, but such papers have already lost all power, if any they ever possessed, either to mould or control the opinion of the masses.

A NEVADA REPUBLICAN.

After an Office

Captain Burns, of San Francisco, went to the Treasury Department Wednesday in connection with his application for the place of Supervising Inspector of Hulls. He was informed that the President would make no appointments, except in cases of absolute necessity, until after the contest between the Executive and the Senate had been settled.

John Peterson, night clerk at the Richmond House, on Third street, San Francisco, was shot and killed yesterday morning by a man to whom he refused admittance to the lodging house of which he had charge. A dispute began with words, which was followed by blows and ended in the man whose identity is yet unknown, in drawing his revolver and shooting Peterson.

There is a proposition to start a small steam laundry in Tuscarora, to be run exclusively by white labor. Such an institution would doubtless pay very well, patronized by our citizens as it should and doubtless would be. There is a general movement on the coast to rid the country of the Mongolian pest, and no more effective means could be devised than by substituting white for Chinese labor wherever it can possibly be done. Such an enterprise should certainly be encouraged by the people of Tuscarora—Times-Review.

A WRONG PRACTICE

Salt Lake Tribune

The old practice which makes a justification for Senators of the United States to leave their places in the Senate and deliver arguments in the Supreme Court ought to be abolished. If it is right then it would be possible and justifiable for a Senator who is a physician to have the practice of a score of rich families in Washington, or when a prize fighter is sent to Congress from one of the moral Eastern States, to have him open a hall with a 24-foot ring, and leave his place in Congress to count his cash at the afternoon matinee. The principle of the thing is all wrong. In the first place it lowers the dignity of a Senator to appear as a lawyer in the Supreme Court. We mean that in theory the lawyer who does such a thing demeans himself, for the other theory is that the office of Senator of the United States is the highest, with a single exception, that mortal can aspire to. Then what time a Senator devotes to law cases is not his own time, but that of the Government of the United States. If his oath of office means anything, it means that he has undertaken to the best of his ability, and to the utmost of his facilities to serve his country as Senator. It does not mean that he will do this on Wednesdays and Fridays, but that Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays he will devote to preparing his cases and that on Saturdays he will deliver his arguments. Again, it is a wrong practice, because almost invariably, when Senators do this kind of work it is for great corporations, and the confusing questions which now stare Senators and Representatives in the face is how to frame such legislation as shall be fair alike to the Government, the people and these same corporations. Suppose the cases involved can not by any possibility come up for hearing in the Senate, some other cases of the same corporation may, and after a Senator has received two or three great fees from a corporation, is it reasonable to believe that, in all cases which come up for legislation in which this same corporation is deeply interested, a Senator who bears the relations of a trusted attorney would incline to favor them. For instance, on Saturday Senator Evans spoke for several hours on behalf of the Southern Pacific Railroad of California. Suppose to-morrow the matter of the forfeited Texas Pacific land grants, which this same company still claims should come up in the Senate, is Senator Evans so great a man that the retainer and praises which he received on Saturday would leave no impression upon him? Is it common for Senators who are in the habit of arguing for corporations their cases in the Supreme Court, to vote against those corporations when their interests conflict with the best interests of the United States, and the questions are left to Congress to adjudicate? The Senate should out of sheer self-respect make a law to stop the members of their body from practicing in the Supreme Court.

CONCERNING CHIPPED DOLLARS

Woodland Mail

By the Mint Act of 1792 the amount of pure gold in a gold dollar was fixed at 24 75 grains. By the same act the amount of pure silver in a silver dollar was fixed at 375 25 grains.

The amount of silver in a silver dollar has never been changed. That of gold in a gold dollar was reduced in 1834 to 23 22 grains, or by about 6 per cent. The gold dollar of to-day is therefore a "chipped dollar," and is worth only 94 cents according to the old standard.

Again, up to 1873, the gold dollar thus chipped and worth in silver only from 94 to 96 cents, was paid out to holders of United States bonds at par, because it was cheaper than the silver dollar. The contract called for coin and the Government wisely selected the cheaper coin.

Now that the silver dollar has in turn become cheaper than the gold dollar, we are told that unless we pay the bondholders in the dealer coin, we are robbing them. If this be so, we must be in debt to the amount of about five dollars on every hundred of the chipped gold dollars paid to bondholders at par previous to 1873.

The California Alta says

Grazing lands in Nevada and Utah are being inquired for now, and the disposition seems to be for stock-raisers to buy and own their ranges. There are now three stock men from Indian Territory, and others from Idaho and Dakota, examining lands with a view of purchasing. There are negotiations pending for the sale of one range of 115,000 acres, in Nevada, and the owner of a large range is negotiating for the purchase of 25,000 acres more. In Utah, two ranges, one of about one hundred and twenty thousand acres and one of about twenty five thousand acres are being negotiated for. In Utah, also, a very large cattle range, embracing 240,000 acres, has recently been purchased by George Crocker, John W. Taylor and Lieut. Buford, U. S. N. Messrs Crocker and Taylor are now in Utah, engaged in purchasing stock for this large range.

The London riot is over.

THE WALKER LAKE BULLETIN EXPRESSES

itself on the Senatorial question as follows

Nobody knows who is to be chosen as the best Republican candidate for United States Senator. The friends of Stewart are strong, and numerous. Stewart is an able and experienced statesman and would not be distasteful to many voters, although he has the question of residence to meet and even the sack is waved by his opponents as a battle flag.

The principal Democratic aspirant will, it is believed and hoped by his followers, wave a sack but not as a taunt. His sack will be shaken where the jungle of its contents will do the most good, but even his staunchest supporters do not feel very great confidence in the result. To return to the Republicans, Powning is now working hard, and is making friends. He has no sack worth finding fault with, nor has he to confront the charge of being a Californian. While Mr. Powning was in the State Senate he was an active worker for Washoe county, and would probably be as eager for Nevada in the United States Senate.

It may be truly said that a United States Senator goes to Washington to make laws for the whole country, and not to grab for pickings for his State, but when public money is to be distributed it does no harm to have a man there who will see that some of it comes our way. In this Mr. Powning can be relied on, at least to the best of his ability. Should he be sent to Washington he will have to contend with a stronger class of men than he met in the Legislature elected by Fair, but he would not miss any opportunity and his constituents would never have to complain of wilful neglect.

It is too soon to even guess the name of the coming man, for there are others who may cut a little pattern for themselves out of the political cloth. Hobart may yet be persuaded to enter the field, Stevenson or Strother might come in, and there is plenty of time for ambition to attack other prominent men, still the people often take a notion not to be led, and if Powning can develop sufficient strength in his own county to make him a popular candidate, he might ride over the track without paying toll to those who try to keep the gate where Senators drive.

The New Judge Law

Austin Reveille.

Just now the State papers are spreading themselves over columns of space in discussing the District Judge law. We have labored through a good many of those columns and talked to a number of legal gentlemen who ought to be best posted in the premises and have not been able to form much of a conclusion regarding the matter. We find equally learned jurists differing in opinion as to its constitutionality. Some hold that it is full of illegal points while others are equally certain that it is constitutional in all its pertinent provisions and urge the original idea that it was gotten up in the interest of economy—for it does away with four District Judges and consequently is that much cheaper to taxpayers.

The State of Nevada now has seven District Judges who have little or nothing to do for a major portion of their time. Three Judges could do the work of the State better than seven now do it, because they would be in steady work and become better fitted for the duties than can any one who has comparatively little to do. We believe the new law would not only save from $15,000 to $20,000 a year in salaries but would give the huggans better satisfaction.

The principal objection to the new law seems to come from the western counties where District Judges are as thick as candidates. The cry there is that they want Judges all to themselves and assert that if they are willing to pay for it, it is nobody's else business. Just there they make a mistake. It is the particular business of the entire State whether or not they are required to support three or seven Judges. The whole thing is a nutshell is about this, according to our way of thinking. Seeing that the legal aspect of the case is so befuddled and mixed the economic feature should have precedence and the new law be held as binding.

Of course it will be appealed to the Supreme Court for settlement some time before the election next Fall. If the Supreme Court must act upon it it is important that they should do so as soon as possible so that all may know which law is to govern in the case. If Governor Adams could be prevailed on to remain in the State long enough to attend to his duties he could now issue his proclamation and get it in shape for settlement at once.

It seems pretty well settled that Judges McKenney and Rising are sure of renominations and that the third place will be disputed by Judges Murphy, Bigelow and Edwards on the Republican side, and Rives, Webster, Seawell, Ellis, Deal, Creswell and others on the Democratic side for the nominations for three District Judges and one Supreme Judge. With the constitutionality of the law in doubt, however, it interferes very materially with the outlook and mode of procedure. Really nothing can be done until a decision is rendered.

Surviving Wives of Great Men

The survival of Mrs. Hendricks suggests the fact that nearly all the prominent actors in the late war, whether soldiers or statesmen, have died before their wives. Mr. Hendricks was one of the members of the Senate from 1863 to 1879. His two great compeers during the latter part of his term, Messrs. Thurman and Bayard, are both living, and so are their wives. Mr. Lincoln's wife lived twelve years after his dramatic death in April, 1865, and died at her old home in Springfield, Illinois, the more unfortunate, perhaps, for being so long a widow. The wife of Mr. Lincoln's great Democratic opponent in Illinois and competitor for the Presidency in 1860, Stephen A. Douglas, is living with her second husband. Mr. Douglas died at the opening of the war. The wife of John C. Breckinridge, another candidate for the Presidency in 1860, and still later a leading General in the Confederate Army, is still living at the old family home in Lexington, Kentucky. General Breckinridge himself died twelve years ago. Generals McClellan and Grant, the first and last commanders of the Army of the Potomac, have but recently died, both leaving widows. General Lee's wife, though a confirmed invalid during the entire war, survived her husband a short time. Mrs. Stonewall Jackson is still living. So is Mrs. General Thomas and Mrs. General Custer. Mrs. Andrew Johnson was confined to her bed during most of the time her husband was President and was for several years after, but she was the last to die. The tragic story of Garfield, who was a leader in the House of Representatives during the war, is still fresh in the minds of everybody. His widow is a comparatively young woman, and lives in Ohio. Generals Sherman and Hancock married before the war, and their wives are still with them. General Sheridan was the last of the war heroes to marry. He looks to be sixty, and is not far from that, but his wife is both a young and beautiful woman. Jefferson Davis is still living, but his wife, who is a daughter of General Zachary Taylor, is far more robust than he. Of all the great men of the war that I now call to mind, General Beauregard is the only one who has survived his wife, but yet wears mourning out of respect to her memory.

We might go away from home and say that the King of Spain has just left a widow who is but twenty-seven. Alfonso's mother, ex Queen Isabella, is yet living, and has been a widow for many years. Victoria has reigned a quarter of a century since the death of the Prince Consort, and Eugene has lived in woods at Chislehurst since Louis Napoleon died in 1873. The late Czar of Russia left a consumptive, broken hearted wife, and we all know the story of the unhappy Carlotta, the widow of Maximilian, who made the ill-fated venture to Mexico. The Emperor of Germany is the oldest of all the rulers of Europe, being past eighty, but his wife seems to be determined that he shall not be a widower.

It is a fact that nearly all great men die before their wives, and it is another fact that the widows of these great men very seldom marry the second time. Of all the widows of men who took distinguished parts in our late war, mentioned above, not one married a second time. It is not all probable that Mrs. Garfield or any of the widows of her class who yet survive will ever re-marry. Even if they had a disposition to do so, public sentiment would have to oppose it, however young and fair be the woman. Last week I spoke of the fact that all the heroes of history have been married men. This is the highest tribute that could be paid to womankind, and the world demands in return that the widows of its heroes shall be faithful to their memories.—New York Exchange.

The Cut in Passenger Rates.

The Bulletin says:

The cutting of passenger rates which is being indulged in by local agents of some of the Iowa and other Eastern lines is claimed to be supported by the Transcontinental lines. Cuts of $15 or more could hardly be made by roads east of Omaha, which get only $30 for the 1,000 miles to New York, while the $84 from Omaha west gives a margin for considerable cutting. It is held by railroad men that overland fares should be far less than they are now. On many of the Eastern roads only 1 cent a mile is charged on long hauls, and 2 cents is considered enough for any road. On the basis of 2 cents for the Transcontinental roads, which is considered liberal, fares would be $40 from here to Omaha, or about $70 to New York, still leaving a greater margin for reduction than in many other roads have on through business. But whether the question of rates will again be discussed at the meeting of the Transcontinental Association in New York is not known here. It is the opinion of some of the best informed abroad men that there is so much danger of a dissolution of the association, there is too much at stake. A dissolution would at once plunge all of the roads into a war which would cost a very great amount of money, and for that reason an agreement as to division of business, which seems to be the only point to be settled will be arrived at if possible.

SENATOR FAIR.

Off to Washington—What He Will Try to Do.

The Silver State of Thursday says: United States Senator J. G. Fair arrived here yesterday from Virginia City on his way to Washington, accompanied by E. J. Coleman, U. S. Bank Commissioner. Many old acquaintances met him at the depot, and were cordially received by him. The Senator is a plain, every-day-kind-of-a-man, wholly devoid of airs, and an untiring worker. He says he shall use every means in his power to have operations resumed at the Carson Mint, and that he will endeavor to convince the Postoffice Department that the mail service in the State should be increased for the accommodation of the people. He repeated what he asserted here last Spring on his return from Washington, that there is no danger of silver coinage being suspended. He expects to return to this coast in about three months, or sooner if Congress adjourns, and in the meantime will do all he can at the National Capital for the interests of the State. Urgent business kept him in San Francisco, but had there been a move against the silver interest in Congress he should have hastened to the capital regardless of consequences to his personal affairs. It is the first time since his election to the Senate that he has been absent from Congress.

Appointed Postmaster.

Of the new Postmaster at Winnemucca the Silver State says:

William Perkins has been nominated by the President for Postmaster at this place, vice E. C. Robins, whose term expires on Monday. Mr. Perkins is an old soldier, who served in the war for the Union, and is a member of McDermitt Post of the G. A. R. The retiring Postmaster, F. C. Robins, has held the office since 1870, and performed its duties faithfully and efficiently, giving general satisfaction to the public. Mr. Perkins' appointment has not yet been confirmed by the Senate, but it doubtless will be at an early day.

Humored Reopening of the Mint.

The Appeal says it has been humoredly reliable authority that a man is now on his way from Washington to place the Mint machinery in order preparatory to resuming coining operations. If the Mint is reopened at Carson it will be through the influence of Senator Fair.

EX-SENATOR TABOR'S PRESENT DOINGS.

—This reminds me that ex-Senator Tabor, of Colorado, still lingers in New York. He has been negotiating a $500,000 mortgage loan on the property he owns here on lower Broadway. The Tabor Opera House at Denver is included in the security. Tabor watches speculative movements as if he were fascinated, and I am told that he intends to use his $500,000 loan as a big stake to retrieve his fortunes. He has lost considerable money in the last five years, but is still wealthy if he would husband his property. I saw him the other day in a broker's office pocketing $150 which he had won in a small gamble on wheat. I am told he takes flyers daily in pork, oil and even in stocks, by means of which he is getting his hand in for bigger play.—New York Letter in Cincinnati Enquirer.
